

Contents

List of abbreviations	13
Introduction	15
1 Investigating populist political communication in Poland	23
1.1 Introduction	23
1.2 Populist ideology and populist political communication	24
1.3 Elements of populist style of communication	26
1.4 Media and populist political communication	30
1.4.1 Populism through the media	31
1.4.2 Populism by the media	32
1.4.3 Populist citizen journalism	32
1.4.4 Factors behind media populism	33
1.5 Citizens and populist political communication	35
1.6 Previous studies on populist political communication in Poland . .	37
1.6.1 Definitions of populism in the Polish scholarship	38
1.6.2 Populist political actors	42
1.6.3 Media and populism	44
1.6.4 Citizens and populism	47
1.7 Conclusions	50
I POLITICAL ACTORS	51
2 Populist discourse of Polish right-wing parties: the study of electoral manifestos	53
2.1 Introduction	53
2.2 Political context of the 2015 presidential and parliamentary elections	53
2.3 Discursive approach to populism	59
2.4 The study	62
2.5 Populist strategies in the right-wing political parties' manifestos . .	64
2.5.1 Construction of "the people"	64
2.5.2 Construction of "the elite"	77
2.6 Conclusions	88

3	Right-wing political parties' populist communication strategies on social media	91
3.1	Introduction	91
3.2	The study	92
3.3	Construction of "the people"	93
3.4	Construction of "the elite"	97
3.5	Construction of "the others"	101
3.6	Conclusions	105
II	THE MEDIA	107
4	Populist political communication across media outlets in Poland	109
4.1	Introduction	109
4.2	Features of the Polish media system	110
4.3	Structural factors behind the presence of populism in media	111
4.4	The study	113
4.4.1	Method	113
4.4.2	Sample	114
4.5	Indicators of populist style across media outlets	118
4.6	Types of "the people", "the elite", and "the others" across media outlets	120
4.6.1	"The people"	120
4.6.2	"The elite"	122
4.6.3	"The others"	124
4.7	Distribution of populist strategies across media outlets	125
4.8	Reporting on populism across types of media	128
4.8.1	Market orientation of the print press: quality versus tabloid press	129
4.8.2	Frequency of publishing: dailies versus weeklies	130
4.8.3	Political orientation of the media outlets	131
4.8.4	Media ownership of TV stations	132
4.9	Types of populism across media outlets	133
4.10	Conclusions	136
5	Political actors and journalists as speakers of populist messages across the media	139
5.1	Introduction	139
5.2	Journalists' roles in populist political communication process	140
5.3	The study	142
5.4	Types of speakers across the media	144
5.5	Types of populism in speakers' statements	151

5.6	Journalistic role performance and populism in the media	153
5.7	Journalists' attitudes towards populist messages	155
5.8	Conclusions	157
6	Populist political communication in the Polish media in the election (2015) and non-election period (2016-2017)	159
6.1	Introduction	159
6.2	The 2015 "double elections" as a context of populist political communication	161
6.3	The study	162
6.4	Elements of populist style across time	163
6.5	Types of "the people", "the elite", and "the others" across time	166
6.6	Types of populism in the media in election and non-election periods	168
6.7	Populism in news on elections	171
6.7.1	Elections as a topic of the news in 2015-2017	171
6.7.2	Elements of populist style in the news on elections	172
6.8	Conclusions	174
III	CITIZENS	177
7	Individual and social populist dispositions in Polish society	179
7.1	Introduction	179
7.2	Populism - a threat or an opportunity for modern democracies?	179
7.3	Social capital and populism	180
7.4	Social factors conducive to Poles' susceptibility to populist offer and message	181
7.4.1	Social and institutional distrust	182
7.4.2	Aversion towards elites and political parties	184
7.4.3	Level of sociopolitical involvement	185
7.4.4	Attitude towards the Catholic Church and the religiosity of Poles	188
7.5	Populism and citizens' individual predispositions: review of public opinion surveys in Poland	190
7.5.1	Attitude towards populism	191
7.5.2	Studies on electorates	192
7.6	Conclusions	194
8	Populist communication and mechanisms influencing its persuasiveness	197
8.1	Introduction	197

Contents

8.2	A model of the effects of populist political communication on individuals	198
8.3	Comparative social experiment: the methodology	201
8.4	Cognitive reactions to populist communication and their influence on attitudes and electoral behavior: the results of the social experiment	205
8.5	Conclusions	208
	Conclusions	209
	Bibliography	213
	Sources	241
	Notes on contributors	243